Postumaster Benton is working dike a beaver to get the postoffice department to consent to the increase of the force, and it is more than likely that his efforts will succeed. Besides a big increase in the carrier force, he has also saked for a janitor and an assistant to the money order clerk, both of which are absolutely indispensible. Think of it. A postoffice in a city of 50,000 people, where every man is his own janitor. A janitor is a luxury or a necessity that Salt Lake's postoffice has never yet enjoyed. It is understood that Inspector Lawrence and Inspector Patterson both favor the grant in gof the requests made, and that the department looks upon the matter in a most favorable light.

I have asked Mayor Scott about it, and he seems anxious that the work should go on. Why it does not, I cannot say. The county bas paid the city its share of the cost of the ground, and is ready with its money for the building."

Judge Smith is no longer connected with the county offices, but up to a recent date he was on the building committee, and he said he knew of no reason why the work was not being pushed.

A prominent Liberal, speaking of the matter, said he supposed the whole trouble was that the city was out of funds. Another Liberal, who heard him, said that was too thin. No money had been on hand all summer for one thing; for another, it would take a long time to put up the building, and the money would only be called for in instalments; it was not as if the city had to raise it all at once.

In other quarters it is rumored that the city officials do not "hitch" with Architect Apponyi, and that the delay is due to a desire to find some means to tarow him overboard.
